

OUR SUMMER RESORT.

A Hot Wave from the Furnaces of New York and St. Louis.

Some Valuable Suggestions on Different Thermal Topics.

Chicago Faring Well as Compared with Mead in Other Cities.

IN CHICAGO.

The great heat wave seems to have struck this exceptionally favored latitude at last. The heat of it that present appearance all indicate a purpose to stay. For the past three or four days the mercury has mounted the thermometer, and man has gone to his labors with clean hands and come home with garments rolled in perspiration. For Chicago has been hot; very hot, in fact; exceptionally so, and certainly not to dispense the warmth of the regions of which the weatherman is believed to be drifting, internally hot. Politicians have clasped hands across the fiery chasm, and agreed on the only subject on which they ever approached unanimity—that it was time to see what all the new legislation in connection with the electrical condition of things which prevailed before the term set in. The very memory thereof is little but an aggravation now. The heated tem is here, has been here long enough for everybody to have become acquainted with it, evidently means to stay awhile and enjoy itself, and everybody has philosophically concluded that it is the part of wisdom to make the best of it.

An over-present consolation is that it might be a dead worse. In fact, it has been worse here on occasions, though it is a pleasure to state that the heat has rayed off a little, and that the temperature has been tempered, however slightly, by a mild breeze, which has mercifully tended to reduce the amount of stored-up profanity in the air. The heat has been most intense on the shady side of the street has seldom been so popular as within the last few days. Umbrellas and fans have been used to good effect, and turned-down collars, and no collars at all. Cutts were discarded by all sensible people about noon Sunday, after the first pair donned them, and have not been seen since.

The crop of summer drinks has been larger than by the invention of a few new ones of eau de toilette, and in many cases, far into the night. With more determination than the master of gulling, some

HAVE BEEN LESS SWELTERING.

But discrimination is something that easily distinguishes between the profane, to get out without it. Then the swellers some more.

Another consolation, fully as sweet and as precious as the first—the unfortunate denizens of New York, Cincinnati, and St. Louis, for instance, who have passed in the Pithomite mills week in either of the two last-mentioned Genesee have been counted as zephyrs, while the remaining spots which could have gone up for more of them. While Chicago has been undergoing an exceptional strain of exertion, not without the usual attendant storms of the Ohio and the Missouri have been experiencing greater ardor, but having been used to it all their lives, have been less sweltering.

It seems the hot-weather season, though yet young, has been productive of a crop of suggestions, all the way up from emigrants to laborers, who would bequeath a mosquito-netting suit that nobody would blusther to wear, to the more formal deliveries of the Illinois State Board of Education. The poor farmer has come out with a sage piece of advice in favor of wet sponges on horses' heads, careful driving, and the like. The manufacturer of steaks in the shade whenever the shade can be located and made use of. The police suggest emanating from Lake Michigan to the great green land, and above all, out of the practice, all too current in large cities, of leaving babies now and then on people's front doorsteps, to be picked up by the Home to care for them until the children are adopted, and "no questions asked." What is not specifically mentioned is that the parents who leave them, if they will deposit their offspring on anybody's front steps, should seek one on what is known as the "poor steps" street, and not vice versa, and not show any favor to a stone which may become very much heated in the early part of the day.

EXCUSES OF THE SUMMER SHOWS.

of the streets, which were of course burning hot, there were certain spots about town yesterday which were to all intents and purposes hellish. The sidewalk in front of the Post Office, nothing of the sidewalks where no sheltering building served at any time to shade the sun, rays, that were to be found in the sunken portion of the Custom-House were receiving and giving off the most intense heat, no matter which side one took. Perhaps an hour's walk in the shade of the buildings in the city was the Board-of-Trade attire, particularly in the afternoon. In the morning, before the sun had risen, the great mass of beer-sip, waste lemon-juice, dead flies and seventy-two other distinct and separate kinds of stuff which made it an abomination in the most popular places, were in every state. When the sun mounted high in the heavens and stood directly overhead, and the heat increased, the heat was intense, not only stark, but searing. The stomach of the bravest man in the "grease-pit" almost gave way under the pressure of the heat, and passed by as rapidly as their walking apparatus could carry them. The scent of the sun was as strong as the perfume of the flowers, and the lemonade fountains at the Tivoli as the latter exceeded in violence the disgusting effluvia from the nostrils of the Health Commissioner who was to inspect the Health Department, to let him send around a scavenger wagon to clean up after it had been put to its most powerful steamers and fortwith subdue the place to thorough flushing. The Board of Trade, however, put its finger to its nose after that performance.

The temperature yesterday, as per the Meteorological Bureau, Madison street, Tribune Building, was as follows: 8 a.m., 69 degrees; 10 a.m., 81 degrees; 12 m., 90 degrees; 3 p.m., 88 degrees; 5 p.m., 84 degrees. Barometer, 30.11. Joseph Grubbs, 55 years of age, employed by the Illinois Elevator Company, was overcome by the heat yesterday evening. He was taken to his home, No. 11 Monroe, and died there. Dr. Leonard. The deceased was a member of George Gibson's family. Peter Olsen Sandacker, 22 years of age, while at work in his shop, at the corner of Noble and Dearborn Streets, was overcome by the heat, and was carried to his home, No. 207, West Dearborn Street. His wife sent for Dr. Hinrich, but before he arrived the man died. The Doctor pronounced it a case of heat prostration, the result of Norwegian birth, and a tailor by occupation. John Ekdahl, aged 20 years, was working on Jacob's Pier, between Halsted and Des plaines, was stricken with heat yesterday. He was taken to his home at No. 3, Dearborn Street, and was there attended by several physicians, who thought he would recover.

The work of adding up the total amount of assessment for real estate and personal property in the Assessor's office of the South Side is progressing rapidly, and the last brake here is to have all the books in shape by Saturday, so that the figures can be correctly assessed.

At the North Town Assessor's office the tax books are being footed up by a large force of clerks, but the work will hardly be completed by Saturday, as the work is to be done by that day. There have been two complaints of over-assessment. The tax assessor told me to tell those that he taxed some to pay.

The West Town Assessor is not far along, and the work is to be done by Saturday.

For the assessment of the South Side, the reason for the delay is that the field session of Lake George should continue one week.

ANNUAL ASSESSMENTS.

The work of adding up the total amount of assessment for real estate and personal property in the Assessor's office of the South Side is progressing rapidly, and the last brake here is to have all the books in shape by Saturday, so that the figures can be correctly assessed.

At the North Town Assessor's office the tax books are being footed up by a large force of clerks, but the work will hardly be completed by Saturday, as the work is to be done by that day. There have been two complaints of over-assessment. The tax assessor told me to tell those that he taxed some to pay.

The West Town Assessor is not far along, and the work is to be done by Saturday.

For the assessment of the South Side, the reason for the delay is that the field session of Lake George should continue one week.

The meeting of the Lake George Spars Association, held at the Hotel New York, on Friday, the 12th, it was voted that the field session of the Association be held at the Hotel New York, and that the members of the trade from other States be expected to be present. Part of the time will be devoted to business, and the latter part to socializing. It is believed that the session will be the most successful in the history of the Society.
